See you there!

Anthony (Tony) Chvala-Smith lives in Independence, Missouri. He co-serves the Community of Christ with his wife Charmaine at the International Headquarters, where they are Scripture and Theology Specialists. Their responsibilities include writing and editing, consulting with leaders and members on theological issues, and guiding members across the church in the task of thinking about the church's faith. They especially enjoy the opportunity to teach and preach in congregations throughout the church, and their ministry has taken them to French Polynesia, England, the Netherlands, Bolivia, Kenya, and Zambia. A major part of their ministry includes teaching undergraduate scripture and theology classes at Graceland University, as well as graduate courses at Community of Christ Seminary, where Tony is Adjunct Professor of Early Christian Theology.

Tony grew up in Clare, Michigan. A theologian by vocation and training, his studies have taken him to Princeton Theological Seminary (M. Div., 1983), the Toronto School of Theology (Advanced Studies in New Testament), and Marquette University (Ph.D. in Scripture, 1993). He has special interests in the writings of Paul, early monastic theology, and the use of the Bible in Christian theology and spiritual formation.

When Tony has spare time, he likes to cook, travel, read, and garden. He especially loves cats, any and all Star Trek stuff, Thai food, and good coffee.
